

NIEHS Worker Training Program

Program Overview

- The National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences (NIEHS) Worker Training Program (WTP) provides awards to organizations to develop model worker safety and health training programs for workers involved in handling hazardous materials or in responding to emergency releases of hazardous materials.
- Since 1987, WTP has developed a strong network of nonprofit organizations that deliver high-quality, peer-reviewed safety and health curriculum to hazardous waste workers and emergency responders in every region of the country. These courses have established national benchmarks for quality worker safety and health training, including a strong emphasis on peer instructors and hands-on instruction.
- More than 4.5 million workers across the United States have received WTP-supported safety and health training.

WTP Program Areas

- Hazardous Waste Worker Training Program (HWWTP) – This program provides model occupational safety and health training for workers who are or may be engaged in activities related to hazardous waste removal, containment, or chemical emergency response.
- NIEHS/Department of Energy (DOE) Nuclear Worker Training Program – This program focuses on training workers engaged in environmental restoration, waste treatment, and emergency response activities at sites in the DOE nuclear weapons complex.
- Environmental Career Worker Training Program (ECWTP) – This program focuses on delivering comprehensive training to increase the number of disadvantaged and underrepresented minority workers in areas such as environmental restoration, construction, hazardous materials/waste handling, and emergency response. Prior to 2014, the ECWTP was known as the Minority Worker Training Program (MWTP). The NIEHS/U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Brownfields MWTP ended in 2008 and a specific Brownfields job training component has been incorporated into this program.
- HAZMAT Disaster Preparedness Training Program (HDPTP) – This program supports the development and delivery of disaster-specific training to prepare workers to respond to natural disasters and possible future terrorist incidents involving weapons of mass destruction.
- Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) E-Learning for HAZMAT Program – This program focuses on the development of e-learning products that support health and safety training of hazardous materials workers, emergency responders, and skilled support personnel; community and citizen preparation and resiliency; and research into the acute and long-term health effects of environmental disasters.
- Biosafety and Infectious Disease Training - These training courses support the development and implementation of occupational safety and health and infection control training programs for workers in health care and non-health care settings who may be at risk of exposure to infectious diseases.
