31. Using an integrated comprehensive evaluation process to enhance the effectiveness of community-based health and safety training programs (CPWR – Sue Ann Sarpy) Tracks: Life Skills and Job Training/ Instructor Development

The Sarpy and Associates, LLC research team, working with the Center to Protect Workers' Rights (CPWR), has established a process for evaluating the effectiveness of eight community-based training programs. Through round table discussion, this interactive session will present evaluation results and discuss the best practices, including underlying principles of adult education, identified across the eight programs. Further, an interactive hands-on activity and related discussion will review steps to more fully integrate these concepts into current community-based health and safety training program practices to achieve desired outcomes.
