2. Workshop Summary
The objective of this 90 minute workshop is to use an interactive approach to engender discussions related to the use evaluations in assessing and enhancing training programs. This portion of the discussion utilized a case study of a comprehensive integrated evaluation process developed for and implemented by the Center to Protect Workers’ Rights to assess and continuously improve their Brownfield Minority Worker Training (BMWT) and Minority Worker Training (MWT) Programs. The specific session learning objectives included: (1) discuss an overview of the evaluation process including the sources and types of information that is collected; (2) review the outcomes of the evaluation; (3) Discuss considerations (i.e., lessons learned and best practices) in adapting the process for use in evaluating other training programs.

This portion of the session highlighted the process, established by the Sarpy and Associates, LLC research team working with the CPWR, for evaluating program effectiveness of their BMWT/MWT programs. This evaluation process, developed and conducted across five programs years, was used to assess the eight geographically dispersed programs. This interactive session presented information regarding the evaluation results and best practices identified. Further, considerations to integrate these concepts into health and safety training program evaluation processes (e.g., use of multiple stakeholders, process and outcome measures, longitudinal designs) were presented.
