

NIH Climate Change and Health Webinar Series

Notes from the Field: Pivoting a Research Program to Climate Change

Hosted by NINR

December 17, 2021

12:00 - 1:00 p.m. EST

*Free, Open to the Public,
Registration required*

Speakers

- WELCOME: Shannon Zenk, Ph.D., M.P.H., R.N., F.A.A.N., NINR Director
- Linda A. McCauley, Ph.D., R.N., Emory University, Nell Hodgson Woodruff School of Nursing, Climate Change and Nursing Research

Nurse scientists play a critical role in climate change research to inform public policy and healthcare practice. Dr. Linda McCauley will share highlights of her 20+ year career as an environmental and occupational health nurse researcher and describe how her research program pivoted from the effects of pesticide exposure on vulnerable populations to climate change. She will provide perspective on the compelling questions nurses are poised to answer around climate change and public health.
